

CLARITY

It is hard for me to describe a project based on change. Everyone goes through changes in life and everyone thinks about them differently. The past 6 months have been full of change for me, I went through a big breakup, most of my friends were abroad, and I was under the most stress I've been at college. The two people featured were the two that were by far the most important to me during this time. The images surrounding them are my blurry, abstract emotions that came from that change. But that's how I saw my change, replace the people and replace the images with your own distorted, blurry memories an important time for you and maybe you will see something different, hopefully you'll see change.
